

2013 ICPA Best Papers Awards

The 9th ICPA will select and recommend the best papers for publication in one of the following journals subject to blind reviews:

Public Administration Review (PAR)—the best paper that focuses on identifying and analyzing current public administration trends in theory and practice.

The Public Administration Review (PAR) is the premier journal of the American Society for Public Administration with a history dating back more than 60 years. The journal serves academics, practitioners, and students interested in public sector management and provides a factual basis for decision-making, discussion, and literature in the field in an easily accessible format.

Public Integrity—the best paper that focuses on ethics, integrity, corruption, or a related issue.

The Public Integrity is the journal of American Society for Public Administration and the foremost journal on ethics and leadership in all aspects of modern public service. Written for both scholars and practitioners as well as concerned citizens, its driving force is the notion of integrity that is so basic a part of democratic life. The journal features refereed articles, case studies, exemplar profiles, field reports, commentaries, and book reviews on a broad spectrum of ethical concerns in local, state, national, and international affairs.

Chinese Public Administration—the best paper that focuses on international comparative study.

The Chinese Public Administration is the journal of Chinese Public Administration Society and has been the top tier journal in Public Administration and Political Science in China since its establishment in 1982. It is a window for scholars and practitioners outside China to understand the history and development of Chinese public administrative and a bridge that connects China and the World.
